swanky affair

Situated in the laidback residential enclave of Robertson Quay, this penthouse unit is all done up to match its riverside location while fulfilling the requirements of its bachelor owner

STAIRWAY (top left) Black is used on the walls here for dramatic effect while subtly connecting the first and second storeys. To maintain the open concept of the upper level, the designers removed the handrails and replaced them with steel cable. This acts as a safety barrier and allows for the free movement of air and light.

WALK-IN WARDROBE (top right) The bathroom leads to an attached walk-in wardrobe. Encased in glass, the walk-in wardrobe enjoys plenty of light from the outside and has curtains for privacy. Shelves and drawers are well planned out to provide spacious storage not only for clothes and accessories, but also for the owner's shoes.

BATHROOM (middle) Dark grey homogeneous tiles demarcate this designer bathroom from the rest of the open-concept space. Large marble slabs form a gorgeous feature wall, which also helps to reflect light around. As the apartment is situated on the highest floor, the designers modified the ceiling to create a skylight for this mezzanine level.

BEDROOM (bottom) On the other end of this second level is the cosy boudoir of the homeowner. Timber flooring adds warmth to this private space. Sliding glass doors open up to a patio with a glass roof overhead, providing an outdoor space for the homeowner to recline and enjoy the view during cool evenings.
