1 Living room

Even though the unit is fairly new, the family wanted a complete overhaul to better suit their tastes. The designer kept things simple here with a white palette that brightened the room and allowed the family's decorative items and furnishings to stand out. The media unit blends in with the surroundings, sporting just enough detail to add visual interest without distracting from the TV screen.

2 Dining area

This penthouse unit had a very tall but pitched ceiling over the dining room of close to 5m. The designer levelled the ceiling to create a more intimate atmosphere and allow the eye-catching group of pendant lights to be hung at equal height over the dining table.

3 Bedroom

The homeowners wanted a classic yet modern look for their main suite. To achieve this, timeless and neutral beige tones were used for the walls and drapes, paired with wood textures for a natural touch. A calming blue bed frame references the window trim and view outside, creating a restful sanctuary for the owners to retreat to at the end of the day.

4 Kitchen

The cooking zone was completely redone with new flooring, appliances and cabinetry for a fresh look and improved functionality. A white scheme was chosen, along with shaker panel doors and gold hardware to tie in the decor with the communal spaces of the house.

5 Bathroom

Starting from scratch, the designer went with glossy white tiles for the walls and large mirrors across the vanity to create a spacious and clean appearance. In addition to functional overhead lights, cove lighting was installed for ambience and a soft glow for night-time trips to the loo.
